

EU Wants Control of Brexit Defences!

Dear Editor

Whilst there is much talk of trade and economics when the subject of Brexit is raised, no-one seems to want to talk about defence -least of all our politicians.

Writing in the Commentator, Peter Lyon says that we are participating in EU procurement rules that will mean giving up our defence autonomy. "Surrendering our control and money over defence to a supranational state is a very scary prospect. It could result in our national armed forces being deployed, without us having a say."

And he goes on to say: "Even as we negotiate our exit from the EU, our ministers and officials are disgracefully signing us up to this overarching European Defence Union. Our politicians have committed us to sending huge sums of money and abiding by strict EU procurement rules which are the foundation of the European Defence Union."

Our politicians and Whitehall mandarins are all acutely aware of what they are doing and they know that handing over de facto control of our defence means handing over control of our foreign policy and therefore control of our country to the EU by the back door!

As one of the few NATO members that meets its NATO defence spending* target, the UK should not blindly hand over its defences to the control of what is effectively a foreign power - that is both madness and treason combined!

- The book by General Sir Richard Sherriff is a wake-up call from a former Deputy Supreme Allied Commander Europe, DSACEUR. The UK army, navy and air force are in no fit state to defend the UK or play their planned roles in NATO. These targets are not met in reality, as much is theoretical and unfit for immediate purpose.
