

1914

The striking thing about these events is the dangerous and remarkable similarities with the 1914 Sarajevo assassination of the Austrian Archduke by the Bosnian Gavril Princip used as the unjustified excuse for Austria Hungary to attack Serbia, beginning the First World War.

Today we have Britain and France backed by the war seeking USA – then we had Austria Hungary backed by the war-seeking Germany. Then the victim was Serbia allied with Russia, today the victim is Syria also allied with Russia. Then the excuse for war was the “highly likely” but in fact false claim that the Serbian Government was behind the assassin – when leading Austrian Government figures involved admitted that was not the case. Today the excuse is that a chemical attack was “highly likely” by the Syria Government when rebel forces also possess such weapons, have used them and know that on past form Assad will be blamed in the western media for any false flag attack.

In 1914 both the lawyer Wiesner who was sent to Sarajevo to find conclusive proof that the Serb Government was involved in the assassination and the Austrian Foreign Secretary's Chef de cabinet von Hoyos said that they never believed Serbia was involved. But it was too late. Irresponsibility plus the tide of events led to war.

In 2018 a false move could lead to a NATO EU war with Russia and China. In neither case did the excuse for military action justify the risk of a world war in which millions could die.
